

Handout 3.4: My Influences Map

Name: _____ Date: _____ Period: _____

Directions: Three parts. Part 1 is the everyday sort: ten things about a person; mark each H (mostly heredity), E (mostly environment), or B (both). Part 2 is your influences map. It is private. It goes in your FACS folder and nobody reads it unless you choose. Use roles, not names (“a coach,” “my aunt”). Part 3 is the only part I collect: three sentences on the one influence that has done the most to make you who you are, still with no names.

Part 2: My influences map (private; not collected)

Draw yourself in the middle circle (a stick figure is fine, or just write “me”). Around it, in the three rings, write at least eight influences: people, places, and things that have shaped who you are. No names; use roles. Next to each, write the aspect it shaped most: P (body), E (feelings), S (people), I (thinking). Star the three biggest.

If the rings are too small, list them here instead:

[illegible]

Grade 6 and IEP/504: at least five influences.

Part 3: The biggest one (collected)

Which one influence on your map has done the most to make you who you are right now?
Three sentences: what it is (a role, not a name), what aspect it shaped, and why you picked it over the other two stars.

Sentence starter: "The biggest influence on me is ___ because ___."

Grade 8 stretch (Part 4): pick one influence and write how it might look different for a student in another country or another decade. Would the aspect it shaped change?
